Municipal Convention.

As we go to press the Municipal Union convention of Alberta in the Oddfellows hall is in full swing. About thirty delegates from all parts of the province arrived on the noon train and more are expected on the evening train. We welcome the delegates to Red Deer, and extend to them the freedom of the town on behalf of the council and citizens. As the sessions are now going on we might say that interested citizens who wish to attend will be welcomed. A Banquet will be tendered the visitors to-morrow Wednesday evening.

The New Council.

Mayor H. H. Gaetz makes some suggestions.

The Council for 1907 met in the Council chamber on Monday evening last. Mayor H. H. Gaetz and Councillors Tallman, McKee, and Stephenson took the necessary declaration of office and took their seats.

Minutes read and confirmed. The Mayor is extending the season's greetings to the new Council made a few remarks outlining the work before the Council for the present year. He welcomed the new members, Messrs. McKee and Tallman, to the Board and expressed his pleasure at the return of councillor Stephenson for another term. He said the Council had assumed responsibilities and must be prepared to make sacrifices. We cannot avoid these responsibilities. He felt that the same harmony would exist at the council board in the future as had in the past. It would be a mistake to think we must all agree on any line of action. We must concede to others the some privileges of differing as we ourselves demand. We must be prepared to make concessions, but at times must be prepared to adhere to our convictions and if defeated must take our defeat gracefully. One of the most important committees on the council is that of finance, and he hoped a strong committee would be appointed. He felt we should strive to keep up the assessed values of real estate. He favored an income tax, as the present system allowed people drawing large salaries to escape while merchants and others were heavily taxed, which he considered unjust. He commended the system to the consideration of the council. Owing to the extensive system of water and sewerage it may be thought that the tax rate would be increased but he hoped that we could keep the taxes down so that the rate would not be increased. He favored a frontage rate for water works system and thought that a hydrant rate should be collected as a special benefit tax. He brought up the question of a commission, the council had considered the system, and he felt that it would be advisable for the council to keep the question before them. An effort will be made to secure a considerable grant from the town by the Board of Trade. He advocated a liberal expenditure along these lines but he advised caution and not too large a grant for this purpose. The Hospital was deserving of consideration. He threw out the suggestion that a regular rate might be struck similar to the school rate instead of the present system of making grants. He urged that taxes should be paid early instead of as at present, at the end of the year. He advocated that the committees of the council get their work in hand at an early date. He felt it would be necessary for us to extend our water system this year. We should carefully consider the wooden and iron pipe system. He felt we might have to put in another pump or a stand pipe. He favored the extension of some way ratpayers who could not perhaps afford connection with the water system and take a lion in some way on the property raising funds for the purpose by debenture or otherwise. The question of a public park was touched on by his worship, he felt we could secure a suitable spot west of the agricultural grounds and thought it should be considered. The nucleus of a municipal library should be started for the purpose of reference. He felt we would be called on to consider the question of subdividing the town for polling purposes during the year as we are growing too large for one polling place now. After asking the hearty co-operation of the council for the year the mayor took his seat.

The procedure by-law was then read after which the Mayor appointed Councillors Stephenson, Pidgeon and Botterill a committee to strike the standing committees for the year and to report at the regular meeting Thursday evening. Council then adjourned.

Red Deer's Growth

No record was kept of building permits in the town of Red Deer previous to the 23rd of April last, but since that time the records show that permits were issued to the amount of $87,645.

FARM SCALES.

Every farmer should have a pair of Chatham Farm Scales, for, by using them, you will make or save the price in one year.

The Chatham scale will weigh anything up to 2,000 lbs and you get a government certificate with every set.

Now we have a large stock of these scales on hand, and more on order, and for the next thirty days we are reducing the prices and extending the terms.

The old price was $34.00 cash. The new " is 30.00 cash or if you want time we will give it you on application.

Remember we supply, for $1.50 extra, plans and irons for a stock rack to fit this scale, so that you can weigh your live pigs, horses or cattle.

INCUBATORS AND BROODERS.

We are prepared to prove that the raising of poultry and the sale of eggs is the most profitable part of the production of a farm. We know, and you know, that the raising of chickens by setting hens is uncertain, vexatious and wasteful, and while we are offering you better means of conducting the business, we are doing it on such terms that there is no risk or experiment on your part. Come in and see us, and get our prices and terms.

Wishing all our patrons and friends A Merry Christmas,

Almost as Quick as a Gas Stove.

If you are going to cook a steak, Mrs. House-keeper, you want a quiet, brisk fire, don't you? And you want it right away—you don't care to let the rest of the meal get cold while you wait for the fire to burn up. Well, here's a range that will give you a quick, hot fire without waiting.

And when you are through you can bank it down and save your fuel. Because you have perfect control of the fire-box. The Monarch Range is so tightly constructed that no "airleaks" can get in to make your fire slow when you are in a hurry.

The Duplex Draft, which lets in a current of air from each end of the fire box makes the fire burn evenly and regularly. One handle operates both damper doors at the same time, and you can open them as much or as little as your fire calls for.

So when you want a quick fire you get it without loss of time or fuel. It doesn't take much longer than a gas range.

The reason you can't do this with the old fashioned steel range is that the seams in such a range open up from the expansion and contraction of heat and cold and let in the outside air to deaden the fire.

In the Monarch the sides are solid-ripped to Malleable Iron frames extending all through the range. There are Malleable Iron frames around each opening: the Draft Doors, Pouch Feed Door, Ash Door, etc.

So the Monarch remains light as long as you use it, it is the real "satisfactory" range.

A $1.00 COOK BOOK FREE

Has practical hints for the whole year and many valuable hints on diet and marketing.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 8th, 1907.

It is surprising to what lengths the grip press will go in its efforts to do the C. P. R. a bad turn. The coal famine is now laid at the Company's door. Of course the strike and a dozen other things such as early and severe weather, increased demand owing to new settlers pouring into the country and other factors do not count. It is now claimed it was the C. P. R.'s failure to supply cars that is responsible for the whole business. The C. P. R. is no worse than the C. N. R. in this respect yet the former company is singled out for abuse. While we don't defend the C. P. R. company's shortage of cars still we do not think the Company in all fairness is to blame for the coal famine, and we hope there will soon be cars enough as the Company is doing its utmost to overcome the difficulty.

With the death of Baroness Burdett Coutts on Sunday has passed the most notable woman in the one exception of the late Queen Victoria in the English speaking world. That notability was obtained unsought by essentially womanly qualities, qualities that for over half a century have been effectually and unobtrusively displayed, not only in generous response to the calls of the afflicted and the oppressed but in the active initiative in many causes to assist and aid the unfortunate and the cause of Christianity. The descendant and heiress of the shrewdest bankers and financiers in England, the late Baroness Burdett Coutts brought to bear in her life work of philanthropic giving not only the shrewd far-sightedness of a mind which grasped its effect and reasonableness but also the kindest of womanly sympathy and her far-reaching social influence. The deep personal affection displayed by her late majesty to the Baroness Burdett Coutts was felt to a corresponding degree by the people of England, Scotland and Ireland and towards whose best work in charity and benevolence she was not only a generous contributor, but a personal factor in their execution.

Congress has voted against the Carnegie-Roosevelt spelling reform and public documents will be printed as our fathers used to print them. Mr. Roosevelt had ordered that in public documents the new spelling should be adopted. These will have to be changed now at a heavy expense and the plates destroyed.

Hon. A.B. Aylesworth has informed members of the campaign for the suppression of electoral bribery and corruption that during the coming session of parliament, a measure will be introduced increasing the penalties for election corruption, and the act will be so changed to provide for compulsory voting. While the minister of Justice is satisfied that this will not do away with an evil that has become rampant it may result in some good being accomplished.

While the outside world continues to remain in doubt as to the exact bearing of the Manitoba vote on the Roblin telephone policy, the Manitoba government is calling for tenders for poles for the construction of telephone trunk lines. Which reminds us of the story of the minister who had received a "call" to another church, and whose little daughter told an inquisitive visitor that father was in his study wrestling with prayer, but that mother was upstairs packing the trunks.—Ottawa Journal.

The British Columbia legislature has been dissolved and polling for the election of new representatives is fixed for Feb. 2. It is not easy here to comprehend the curves of Pacific coast politics. Mr. McBride, the premier, has to his credit a longer period in power than any of his predecessors for a long time, and moreover, he made an honorable attempt to lift the province out of a financial quagmire that threatened it with virtual bankruptcy. The voters appreciate, and they ought to, they may give him an extension of power.—Montreal Gazette.

Hon. W. H. Cushing, Minister of Public Works, returned a short time ago from a short visit to Madison, Milwaukee and St. Paul. His mission was in connection with the new legislative buildings for Edmonton. He spent some days visiting the Wisconsin buildings which are under construction, and the Minnesota buildings. The buildings in the former will cost when all completed about seven millions, and the latter did cost about half that sum. Alberta has no need for such extensive building as that. However, Mr. Cushing believed that the Alberta Legislative buildings should be worthy of the province. He is much taken with the government buildings in St. Paul, where the exterior is plain but the interior is most artistic. Mr. Cushing has altogether picked up many valuable ideas upon government buildings.

AN ITEM ON HOGS

The Province, Innisfail, has been discussing the price of pork in that town and says:—"We were informed last week that two local men had taken a load of hogs to Red Deer, sold them at 5-4-4 cents, and netted $20 more than if they had been sold to the local buyers. At the time this item appeared there was an advertisement in the columns of the same paper offering $3.50 per 100 lbs. for hogs." The Province does not believe the statement, yet we know of two farmers, who would have sold in Innisfail had the price been right, coming to Red Deer with their hogs, and they hope because they got a quarter cent or better per pound here than in our sister town.

Willowdale.

Willowdale had a crowded house at their S.S. Xmas Tree on Friday evening last. The drills executed by some of the children of the Public school trained by their teacher Miss MacLennan, being a specially pretty feature. The other excellent numbers on the programme, as well as the decorations and refreshments show that all worked hard to make the entertainment a success. A satisfactory collection of over $200 and the distribution of presents to the children concluded the evening's enjoyment.

It is astonishing how many people drive on our streets without sleigh bells. If we have not a by-law compelling people to use bells on their horses, there should be such a by-law passed, and if there is, then it should be enforced.

Mrs. Sarah A. West wishes to tender her sincere thanks to the many friends in Red Deer for their sympathy, and very benevolent and liberal presents, viz: an Xmas Box and a box of groceries and provisions for which both herself and her husband will ever feel grateful.

Red Deer's Agricultural Society has taken out itself a new name, viz: "The Red Deer Exhibition Association Limited". Although the new organization is a limited one, we trust its operations and successes will not be so. And right here we might say it is up to the farmers of the Red Deer District as well as the business men to help make the new organization a success otherwise providing the officers of the Association do their part it will be a case of "Love's labor lost."

Christmas Photos

Christmas is the time for giving and receiving gifts, and it will soon be here, so you should be making up your minds as to what you are going to give your friends. I should say a nice photo of yourself or family is the most appropriate gift you could give or send, as a photo brings back old memories, and your friends are more than grateful for such a remembrance as one never tires of looking over the album with their guests and friends, and would not miss the time spent thus. Now, in sending a picture, it insures you of one in return, which will bring you a two-fold pleasure. You will do well to call at the studio in good time.

WEDDING

On Tuesday evening Dec. 25th a very unique wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mr. Andrew McIntyre of Edwell, when his sister Ethel Amelia was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Harlin Peter Metcalf of Springvale. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. R. Earle, Methodist Minister of Penhold. The happy couple will take up their new residence at Hillsdown.

Blackfalds.

Several of our town people are away on a visit to their old homes. Mrs. L. A. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. McDowell and Mr. Woodie, all left on the same day for points in the central states.

A sad message came for Mr. McDowell two or three days after leaving for his home, telling of the sudden death of his brother whom he expected to visit. McDowell would not know of his brother's death until near his destination.

The James-Trout Merchandise Co. are putting up an extensive addition to their hardware store. This shows the confidence this enterprising firm has in the future prospects of our town.

The Xmas tree entertainment on Monday evening, passed off successfully. The decorating committee had done their work well and the church was a pleasing sight that evening. The seats were full and the boys and girls report one of the best times of their life.

Penhold

The Xmas Trees at the Penhold and Westholme Schools were a great success. "Teddy" Hornsby acted the role of Santa Claus to perfection. "Teddy" hopes that next year's teachers will send in the orders early, as he may have to distribute to several more districts.

How is it that we don't have Christmas trees in the village?

Miss E. Hives came up from Calgary and spent her holidays with her parents.

This severe weather is making great work with the feed, which we expect will be worth a lot to the man that has any to sell in the spring.

Misses Clayton and Durling paid the village a visit last week.

Horn Hill.

Only 40 below zero Thursday. The Christmas tree entertainment was a grand success.

Several of our farmers have been hauling coal from the mines lately.

Mr. Dan Codo has been appointed teacher of our school, replacing Miss Clark, resigned.

Messrs Archie and Leslie Walker and Cora Hall left recently for B. C. where they intend staying the winter.

Rev. J. P. Rice was out here on a business trip.

Geo. Wey had the honor of shooting a fine deer.

O. M. Forhan has sold his buildings to the Methodists who extend turning it into a church. Oswald intends moving into the vacant house next to the hotel and will still continue his Drug store etc.

Rev. Scott Markerville was visiting here this week.

Miss L. Jackson who has been residing with her parents here left for the east last Monday to attend College.

It seems that some men are an adept at lecturing about sociability in our village but we have found out that they are undoubtedly the first to cause enemies, and if they would only keep a still tongue in their head would be though much more of.

Faulks and his folks journeyed west last Sunday to spend the day on the MacDonald, Pierce Ranch.

Coyotes are plentiful around the neighbourhood and are doing quite a little damage to the hen yards.

School opens here the first week in January Miss Forhan has been appointed teacher.

The lamplighter comprised the congregation at evening service last Sunday. We hardly expect people from a distance journeying out in the cold, but we do think what few we have in the village might do their utmost to strain their locomotive members to attend service, instead of keeping their heaters warm.

But she would not be repulsed. Rushing up to Raoul, she threw her arms around him and said to her husband:

"Kill me, and me alone, for I am the guilty one!"

"At these words M. Fauvel glared at the guilty pair and, deliberately taking his time, drew. Neither Raoul nor Mme. Claudine dared to stir. He held the pistol for a fourth shot when a man rushed into the room, snatched the pistol from M. Fauvel's hand, and said to Mme. Fauvel. It was M. Verduret.

"Thank God," he cried, "she is understandable. You know who that man is who that attempt to kill?"

"Her lover!"

"No; her son!"

"That is true," nodded Verduret from Raoul's side. "But I am not sure. I have seen his saggy eyes on his wife, exclaimed:
"It is false! You are all conspiring to kill me!"

"You shall have proofs," replied M.
Verduret. "But first listen."

And rapidly, with his wonderful talents, he related the story of the principal parts of the plot he had discovered. The true state of the case was then terribly translated to M. Fauvel, by the words of the man who had been suspected. His throbbing, yearning heart told him that he still loved his wife. "Why should he punish a fault which he himself had committed?" he thought for by twenty years of devotion and suffering? For some moments afterwards he remembered his explanation. "Fauvel remained silent.
"So many strange events had happened in the last few days, culminating in the murder of his wife. He felt that he was incapable of thinking. If his heart concealed pardon and forgivefulness, wounded pride and self respect demanded vengeance. If Raoul, the son of the man who had murdered his wife, was not in attendance, M.
Fauvel said, were not in attendance, M.
Fauvel would have hesitated—Gaston de Clameran was dead—he would not have told out his arms to his wife and child.

"Come to my heart! Your sacrifices or my honor shall be your absolution at the end and pass forgotten."
"But the son of Raoul is prevented."
"So this is your son," he said to his wife—"this man who has plundered
the house of his father?"

Mme. Fauvel was unable to utter a word in reply. Happily M. Verduret was there.

"I am," he said, "madame will tell you that this young man is the son of Gaston de Clameran. She has never doubted it. But the truth is—"

"What?"

"In order to rob her he has perpetrated a gross imposture."

During the last few minutes Raoul had been looking at Mme. Fauvel, hoping to escape while no one was watching him. But M. Verduret, watching him out of the corner of his eye, had seen just as he was about to leave.

"Not so fast, my pretty youth," he said, dragging him into the middle of the room. "You must also be considered before parting. A little explanation will be edifying."

The jeering words and mocking manner of M. Verduret made Raoul's face steadily pale. He started back as if confronted by a phantom.

"The clown?" he gasped.

"No! Let us see," said the fat man.
"Ah, now that you recognize me, I consider that the clown and myself are ordered the same. Yes, I am the jolly clown of the Jangleball ball. Here is my proof."

And, turning up his sleeve, he showed his arm. "Let us see," said the fat man,
"not sure, examine this scar," he continued. "I gave me this mark the villain who has made this little deception of mine. He led me through a frightful street. That being the case, you know I have a slight claim upon him and shall expect you to relate to me the story of the Jangleball ball."

But Raoul was too terrified to utter a word.

M. Fauvel stepped forward without understanding.

"Into what dark depths of shame and ruin have we fallen!" he groaned.

"Reassure yourself, monsieur," replied M. Verduret. "I have not been constrained to tell you little remains. I will finish the story."

He then told how Louis Clameran had been deceived by the man who had been called as Mme. Fauvel's son with a view to extort money from her.

"Can this be possible?" cried Mme.
Fauvel.

"Impossible!" cried the banker. "An infamous plot like this could not be executed in our midst."

"The light is false!" said Raoul boldly.

"It is a lie!"

M. Verduret turned to Raoul and bowed with ironical respect, said:
"I am not sure, but I have no doubt that your father has certainly have convinced ones. I have just left a friend of mine, M. de Lard, who brought me your letter of denunciation from London. You my young gentleman, I will tell you this little story he told me.

"I am not sure," said M. Verduret, a wealthy and generous nobleman, and a jockey named Spencer, of whom he was very fond. At the Epsom races this jockey had been deceived by the man who had been called as Mme. Fauvel's son. Lord Murray grieved over the loss of his favorite and, having no children of his own, declared his intention of adopting the young man, who was then under four years old.

"Thus James Spencer was brought up in influence as heir to the immense fortune of Lord Murray. He was a handsome, intelligent boy and gave satisfaction to his protector until he was sixteen years of age. Then he became restless and, without any other reason and turned out badly.

"Lord Murray, who was very indulgent towards him, pardoned many grave faults, but his adopted son had been imitating his sis-

...nature upon some checks. "He indignantly dismissed him.

"James Spencer is here living in London for twenty years, managing to escape by gambling and swindling, when he met Clameras, who offered him 25,000 francs to play a part in a little ruse he had arranged."

"You are a detective!" interrupted Raoul.

The man smiled grimly.

"In the present," he replied, "I am merely a friend of Prosper Herriot. It depends entirely upon your behavior whether I shall appear in white or in black upon this little ruse."

"What do you expect me to do?"

"Where are the 350,000 francs which you have?"

The young Raoul hesitated a moment.

"The money is in this room," he said, "in the 350,000 francs which are creditable and will benefit you. I know that the money is in this room and also exactly where it is to be found. Look in the closet for the money."

Raoul saw that his game was lost. He tremblingly went to the cupboard and pulled out several bundles of bank notes and some of the worthless rags called pawnbrokers' tickets.

"Very well done," said M. Verduret as he carefully examined the money and the rags. "In this you have acted wisely."

Raoul had counted on this moment, when everybody's attention would be turned to the money, to make his escape. Suddenly he stole toward the door, opened it, slipped out and locked it on the outside. The key was still in his pocket.

"He has escaped!" cried M. Fauvel.

"Naturally," replied M. Verduret without turning his head. "I thought he would have some reason to do that."

"But—"

"Would you have this affair become public? Do you wish a case to be brought into the police court in which I should be the victim?"

"Oh, monsieur—"

"Then let the victim go free. Here are the 350,000 francs which you accepted. Will the articles which he has purchased. They should consider ourselves fortunate. He has kept 50,000 francs. He has given the rest to me. I will enable him to go abroad, and we shall never see him again."

"Like every one else, M. Verduret submitted to the law. He was not a true traitor. Gradually he had awakened to the true state of affairs. Prospective happiness was possible, and he felt that he was not the victim of a crime more than life. He was not slow in expressing his gratitude. He seized M. Verduret's hand, as if to carry it to his lips, and with closed eyes said:

"How can I ever find words to express my appreciation? How can I repay the great service you have rendered me?"

M. Verduret reflected a moment and then said:

"Since you feel under obligations to me, I have one to ask of you."

"A favor of me? Speak, monsieur."

"You have to name it. My fortune and life are at your disposal."

"I have only one thing to confess. I am Prosper's friend and deeply interested in his future. Can you not exonerate him, restore him to his position?"

"I can do more than this, monsieur. I will love him, Madeleine."

"Madeleine shall be his wife, monsieur. I will give her to you, I will give you my word, and I will so publicly exonerate him that no one shall reproach him with what has been his mistake."

"I will give you my word, monsieur, and came, which stood in a corner, as if he had been paying an ordinary morning call, and turned to leave the room.

"Monsieur," he said before going, "excuse my intruding any advice, but Mme. Fauvel—"

"And she?" cried the poor wretch.

"The banker hesitated a moment, then, following the impulse of his heart, said: "Life and death, clasp her in his arms, and—"

"No; I will not be so foolish as to struggle against my fate. I do not love you, Valentine; forget—I forget all!"

M. Verduret had nothing more to do at Vesinet. Therefore, without taking leave of Raoul, he went directly to the room, and, taking his cab, ordered the driver to return to Paris and drive to the Hotel du Louvre as rapidly as possible.

He was not alone. He had a party with him. He knew that Raoul would give him no more trouble. The young rogue was probably taking his passage for granted, for he would merely separate in circumstances. After long thought he decided that an accusation of poisoning would be a very serious matter. He was there and work upon public opinion, so that to satisfy the townspeople the authorities would order an inquest in Giverny. Raoul would merely separate and Clameras, being warned, would disappear.

It was almost dark when the carriage stopped at the Hotel du Louvre. M. Verduret noticed a crowd of people collected together in groups and heard the police crying "Move on! Move on!"

He saw a man in a black frock coat and one spot to join a more clamorous group a few yards off.

"What has happened?" demanded M. Verduret.

"A strange thing," replied the man. "He first appeared at that seventh-story window. He was only half dressed. He was shouting 'Move on! Move on!' with the agility of a sleepwalker, he

"I suffered with la grippe for several weeks, and nothing I could do took help me until I tried Peruna."

"I felt at its outbreak I had at least secured the right medicine and I kept steadily improving. Within three days I was fully recovered, and I am glad I gave that truly great remedy a trial."

Marsh says, "I have never even heard its efficacy of Peruna questioned. We at once it. I travelled through Kentucky at Peruna three years ago, where I found persons doing its good work. Much of it being used here also."—Henrietta A. Marsh.

Accepting an Heir In Japan.

The custom of adoption is universal in Japan, where it is practiced to keep a family name from becoming extinct. Indeed, there is scarcely a family in which it has not at some time or other been observed. A person who has no male issue adopts a son and, if he has a daughter, often gives her to him as a substitute for a son. The child, who may be the head of a family, or, occasionally adopts, on the point of dying, a son older than himself to succeed him.

Many inherit weak lungs, and die at an early age under the vengeance exposed to attacks of cold and pulmonary diseases. Bickel's Syrup is cheap and good.

The Worthiest Gifts to Flowers.

I have never known man or woman who has not improved in character by becoming devoted to the affairs of flowers, and I venture to say that the most beautiful and useful gifts one can give are roses, carnations, pansies, violets, roses and lilies, to name but a few of the blossoms that silently best the good angels of mankind.

Fate of a Japanese Traitor.

Traitors among the Japanese officers are not treated pleasantly. When misconduct is discovered, Benni Burleigh in his new book on Japan tells us an instant punishment is meted out. One was sunk, and another escaped with difficulty. Who in the ranks of these ships? The Japanese searched to find out who had blabbed and ultimately traced it to a high official in Tokyo, one holding sea rank and engaged in the admiralty. A Russian captain by the name was traced into his hands. He was confronted with it and his receipt signature thereon, then he was led into a school room, where a number of his fellow officers had gathered. They stripped him naked, spat upon him and killed him to death."

A Modern Deadend.

The London papers are printing a story of a man who, taking a woman who married a Moorish scroval, was hanged. He, Bulkhama, and his wife, were taken to the gallows at Alton house in England; and the story runs as follows:—

"I wish I were in England, and in quite modest circumstances. I and it makes me feel it more like see how Mr. Abdullah treats his wife and the way he lives here and there. There is a great difference. He always hitting me, and he laughs at me. He has got me here and I will never see you again, the shall live and die here and there."

Because to our inalterable to carry anything greater than a match first class. So I hastily transferred my trunk and my trunk to make a tithing. We notice by the official Gazette just to hand that John Carlyle Moore, of Red Deer has been granted a Naturalization, and that F. S. Saxon an official auditor for 1907.

Did you see it?

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Booth passed away on Sunday, from bronchitis. The little one was only six weeks old. The funeral took place to-day the service being conducted by Rev. Canon Hinchliffe.

Look for it!

We regret to announce the death of Thomas Brownrigg, a few miles north west of town, last week from blood poisoning. Deceased was 62 years old. The funeral took place on Monday last from his residence, Rev. Mr. Rice conducted the service.

Wait for it!

The body of Mrs. Elizabeth Webb, mother of F. W. Webb, rancher, of Pile of Stones Crossing, about 40 miles down the Red Deer river, was brought to Stone's undertaking parlors on New Years day for preparation for burial. Deceased was 71 years old and died of pneumonia on the 27th ult. The funeral took place to the Union cemetery on the 3rd inst. Rev. Canon Hinchliffe officiating.

It is coming!

The city of Calgary is in a peculiar position at the present time. The first council meeting is on the second Monday in January. At the last meeting in the old year the council repealed the entire municipal by-law abolishing the office of controller as well. The Council has passed legislation making it impossible for any purchases to be made except by order of the controller, and as they have abolished that office the city is practically out of business until the council meets on the 14th inst.

Get ready for it!

The regular monthly meeting of the Alberta Natural History Society will be held at Mr. McVicar's bookstore, Tuesday January 15th at 2.30 p.m. The following is a list of the paid members who have been elected to the committee for the year 1907:—J. C. Moore, Sec'y Treasurer; J. A. Grant, Ed. Wiltin, Canon Hinchliffe, John McVicar, Inspector Bower, Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. Dr. Denovan.

It will be a good one!

Mr. Joseph Kendrew, cousin of J. W. Kendrew, the well known brewer-man, of Edgell, and brother of Mrs. J. W. Kendrew, died at the Calgary Hospital of typhoid fever last week. Deceased was obliged to undergo an operation in November, from which he recovered, but being still weak he remained at a boarding house in Calgary. Contrary to typhoid, he was again compelled to go to the hospital where he only lasted a short time passing away as above. Mr. J. W. Kendrew left at once for Calgary, on hearing of his death, and made arrangements we understand to ship the body east for burial.

What?—Why the Grand carnival on Jan. 17th.

J. D. Campbell, of Brandon has been added to the Canadian Bank of Commerce staff in Red Deer.

For $1 the News and Farm and Ranch Review for one year. We understand that Mr. E. Widen of Burnt Lake has sold his quarter section to Mr. Lockhart of the Industrial school the price being $15 per acre. Mr. Widen has taken over the house formerly owned by Mr. Pengelly and intends to live in town in the course of a few months.

Mr. H. J. Snell, a gentleman with a number of years experience in England watch repairing shops has opened out for business in the premises formerly occupied by Harrison and Patterson, Ross Avenue. As Mr. Snell is a man of experience in his line we have special for him a share of public patronage.

A little item appeared in Edwell news last week which J. W. Kendrew thought reflected on him. We are sorry the item appeared as we personally know Mr. Kendrew to be one of the best known and most competent tradesmen in this part of the country and a man who knows his engines and his work from top to bottom.

An interesting police court case came before Justices W. H. Hanna, Red Deer, and Carruthers of Lacombe, here on Saturday last. A. D. McKenzie of Panhold, had Walter Shuh, and Miss Ayla Hockett up for aiding and abetting Miss McKenzie in leaving her home, reports of which appeared in the papers some time ago. After hearing the charges the justices dismissed the case on the ground that no person can be again brought up for offence for which he has been tried and acquitted. The verdict given by Justice Palmer some time ago is thus sustained. Mr. McKenzie says he will appeal the case.

A. B. Chapman, who resides near Content, was in town last week. It will be remembered that Mr. Chapman spent several months in the Red Deer Hospital last fall, as the result of a frightful accident. A traction engine went through a bridge and toppled over on him holding him down for a considerable time while the scalding steam seemed to be cooking him to death. He has now quite recovered but the scars will be there for life. The horror of the situation is still in his mind, he lost all idea of time while under the engine, he went to his own funeral twice and wanted the people to put him out of his misery in his sane moments as he thought he was crushed to a pulp below the waist. Very few people go through his experience and live to tell it.

Hockey

The Red Deer Hockey team journeyed down to Innisfail Friday night last and played their second League game with the Innisfail team. The rink was only lighted by torches and the Red Deer boys could not see the puck, but they held the game down to 1-1.

The next game will be Innisfail at Red Deer on the 14th inst.
